

New Partner Joins AVP as Co-Practice Leader Sustainability and Waste

We are pleased to announce that Edmund Fleck has joined AVP and will be strengthening AVP's Sustainability and Waste Activities

Edmund Fleck has a Ph.D in Mechanical Engineering from the University of Minnesota (USA) and a Physics Degree from RWTH in Aachen, Germany. He is a well experienced executive with a strong track record in the sustainability and waste industry.

Before joining AVP, Edmund Fleck served as a Managing Director of Martin GmbH für Umwelt- und Energietechnik, Küttner Martin Technology GmbH and as a Director for Martin Biopower Pty Ltd.

Edmund Fleck has extensive experience in the waste-to-energy industry including combustion technology (grate, rotary kiln, fluidized bed), air pollution control, boiler technology, and anaerobic digestion, throughout Europe, North America, Japan, China and India. His experience covers technology management, supply of systems and solutions, EPC as well as global strategic partnering and licensing.

He started his career as a research scientist for electrostatic precipitators at BBC Corporate Research and subsequently moved on to various international functions in technology, sales, project execution in WtE at W+E Umwelttechnik, ABB power generation, and ALSTOM power boilers. Over the years his functions covered division management with P&L responsibility, sales, marketing communication, corporate development, and technology development.

At AVP he will supplement and strengthen our sustainability and waste management practice and exploit the synergies with our other practice areas and market contacts. We are happy to provide you with further information and/or organize a video call to discuss areas of common interest.
